

To whom it may concern,

Working with Brad has been a game-changer for our organisation.

We are a large school spread across five campuses, each with its own context and workflows. Historically, communication between campuses has been a challenge, and many core tasks were being repeated, often two or three times across sites. Brad took the time to first consult with our leadership team to define the top-level strategic goals of our organisation. From there, he engaged directly with each campus to understand their unique needs, challenges, and constraints. He then developed a unified Schoology strategy that tied everything together, improving consistency, reducing duplicated effort, and strengthening the connection between campuses. The impact has been significant, both in terms of efficiency and the sense of cohesion across our sites. For this alone, we are incredibly grateful.

His commitment to going above and beyond is evident in everything he does. Brad is consistently responsive, often replying immediately to support requests, and works proactively to ensure we're making the most of what we have. He regularly brings ideas to the table not because he's asked to, but because he genuinely wants to see our organisation thrive.

At a time when we were seriously considering moving away from Schoology, Brad helped us see the platform in a new light. He helped us unlock its full potential by tailoring it to our goals and creating custom strategies and workarounds that fit how we actually operate. This clarity and customisation shifted our thinking, giving us the confidence not only to stay with Schoology, but to invest in getting the very best from it.

Brad also worked across all layers of our organisation, from IT staff, school leaders, curriculum designers, administrators to the teachers, with an ability to adapt his style and approach to suit the audience. He got everyone aligned and working collaboratively in ways we hadn't seen before.

More than anything, Brad is trusted and deeply respected by our staff. They love working with him, not just because the support is effective, but because it's delivered with warmth, patience, and a great sense of humour. His sessions are valuable, empowering, and genuinely enjoyable.

We would not hesitate in recommending Brad to any educational organisation that needs a trusted expert in digital learning - someone who not only understands the tools, but knows how to bring people together and deliver lasting change.

Adrian Pilgrim

Teaching and Learning Manager | Professional Services