To any person considering Brad Friis for employment,

Over the last 7 years of knowing Brad Friis I have had the distinct pleasure of buying from him, working with him, utilising him as a consultant and best of all becoming his friend.

Historically we met when myself and many of the DJ's who worked for me at my nightclubs and events were drawn to purchasing numerous products from his music supply business; traits such as his impeccable taste, sense of style and willingness to step outside the norm regularly helped me keep my edge in what is an extremely difficult and competitive industry.

Being a driven self starter Brad and I naturally gelled and numerous times over the years I have found myself seeking his advice, particularly with problems stemming from within the very linked worlds of aesthetics and sales. In my view his grasp on what people want and how best to deliver it to them is simply unequalled. I and my business partner often brought Brad in as a design consultant to assist our ICT company with our clients in areas such as digital design, print media, and web development, an expert at delivering results Brad always had the solution or knew exactly where to go to get it.

Brads critical advice during my 2004 campaign for Napier City Council definitely contributed to my success. After that, his occasional wise council over a quiet drink would assist in moderating some of my more impetuous traits, consistently helping me to make better decisions for the city. Also of note was that more than once his problem solving skills and extremely good Hawke's Bay business network made me finding people to help with outside of the square community and business thinking much easier. His open policy of "my connections are your connections" is something that all people should take to heart when building any successful business network.

For all of the above and many other reasons I wish him the absolute best in any role he seeks; were I still running my own business rather than working for Vodafone I would employ him in an instant. Whichever company nabs Brad during what will be a very short time on the job market will be a very lucky company indeed.

Warm regards,
